Registered savings plans and your estate

How to avoid a tax surprise from your RRSP or RRIF.

Most Canadians are familiar with the tax advantages of using registered savings plans to save for retirement. Contributions to Registered Retirement Savings Plans (RRSPs) are tax-deductible, and any growth or income earned on the underlying investments inside an RRSP or Registered Retirement Income Fund (RRIF) is not taxed until withdrawn. But what happens when an RRSP or RRIF owner passes away? To help provide some clarity, we've compiled a list of answers to some frequently asked questions.

Why am I receiving a T4RSP or T4RIF?[1]

Under Canadian income tax laws, an individual is deemed to have sold or cashed in their assets for their fair market value at the time of death, including RRSPs and RRIFs. This means a T4RSP or T4RIF slip will be issued indicating the fair market value of the RRSP or RRIF at death. It is the responsibility of the estate, and ultimately the estate beneficiaries, to pay income taxes on RRSP or RRIF assets even though those assets may have been paid directly to a beneficiary named on the plan. It is also important to note that for Canadian residents, no taxes are withheld on amounts paid out of an RRSP or RRIF due to death.

What are the income tax implications? The value of the RRSP or RRIF, as indicated on the T4RSP or T4RIF slip, must be included in the owner's income for the year of death. This amount is fully taxable as regular income. How can the income tax bill be reduced? If the RRSP or RRIF is left to a qualifying beneficiary (named directly on the plan or will), it is possible for the value of the RRSP or RRIF at death to be taxable to the qualifying beneficiary and not the estate.

Who is a qualifying beneficiary? Just to mention a few:

1. Spouse or common-law partner[2] The assets of an RRSP or RRIF can be transferred directly to a spouse or common-law partner's RRSP or RRIF as a tax-free rollover. If the surviving spouse or partner is under age 71, the assets can be transferred to their RRSP. If the surviving spouse or partner is age 71 or older, the assets can be transferred to their RRIF or eligible annuity.

The surviving spouse or common-law partner will report the value of the deceased's RRSP or RRIF on their tax return for the year and will receive an offsetting deduction for the transfer. They will be taxed on any withdrawals made in the future. The actual transfer of the RRSP or RRIF must take place in the year the survivor receives the deceased's RRSP or RRIF, or within the first 60 days of the next year. If the transfer does not take place during the required time frame, the full value of the RRSP or RRIF can still be included on the surviving spouse or partner's tax return, but no offsetting tax deduction will be allowed.

In the case of a RRIF, the surviving spouse or common law partner may be named a successor annuitant in the plan or the will. This means that they will simply receive the same periodic payments the deceased received from the RRIF. No special taxation issues arise on death when a successor annuitant is named; instead, the successor is taxed on the payments received each year.

2. Financially dependent infirm child or grandchild If an RRSP or RRIF is left to a child or grandchild who was financially dependent on the deceased by reason of mental or physical infirmity, the value of the RRSP or RRIF is usually not taxed in the hands of the deceased. In this situation, the child or grandchild can transfer the assets into their own RRSP or RRIF, or purchase a life annuity.[3] The transfer must take place in the year the RRSP or RRIF is received, or within the first 60 days of the next year, and the dependent child or grandchild will be taxed only on future income or withdrawals.

What happens if an adult child is named as beneficiary?

If an RRSP or RRIF is left to an adult child who is not mentally or physically infirm, there is no tax deferral available. The amount will be fully taxable on the final tax return of the deceased and will be passed directly to the adult child named as beneficiary.

[1] Quebec residents receive another form, RL2, used to file their tax returns with Revenu Québec.

[2] As these terms are defined in the Income Tax Act (Canada).

[3] The existing RRSP rollover rules are extended to allow the rollover of a deceased individual's RRSP proceeds to the Registered Disability Savings Plan (RDSP) of a financially dependent infirm child or grandchild.

211 Saskatchewan is a FREE, confidential, 24/7 service that can connect newcomers to resources and services in the province by telephone, text, or web chat, plus a searchable website.

- All Saskatchewan residents now have the ability to search independently on the website, or they can receive assistance with their service search from an Information and Referral Specialist (aka community navigator). Services information include: mental health, senior services, basic needs, healthcare, and much more!
- Services over the phone are available in over 175 languages, including 17 Indigenous languages.
- When accessing the phone, text, e-mail or web chat options, the community navigator helps people get to the root of their issues, search the database for the best service for them, and make the connection.

United Way Regina and United Way Saskatoon & Area have made investing in 211 Saskatchewan a top priority under the focus of building strong communities and connecting people to supports.

I'm seeking connect with Town of Rocanville to help residents learn about the 211 SK service. We would be happy to provide free 211 SK pamphlets, posters, and business cards to distribute to people and can provide custom presentations to your staff and residents upon request. If there is a chance, we would appreciate if 211 SK information could be added to your town's website, newsletter or other publications.
